We need to meet urgently to discuss the situation with Daniel. His latest article could expose everything we've been working on. I believe there might be a way to handle this, but it will require careful planning.

Let's meet after hours tonight. We can't let this spiral out of control.

I understand the gravity of the situation. Daniel has been digging too deep. I'll meet you tonight as planned. We need to ensure this doesn't come back to us.

We'll figure something out. We've been through worse.

I've been thinking about how we can divert attention from us. The janitor, Albert, is scheduled to be on duty tonight. If anything happens, the blame could easily fall on him, given his access and proximity to the newsroom.

This could be our way out. Let's make sure everything goes according to plan.

That could work. If we time everything right, it'll look like he was the only one there when it happened. We'll need to be very careful, though. Any mistake could lead them back to us.

I'll make sure to be seen leaving earlier in the day, so I have an alibi. You should do the same.

Let's make this happen.

Robert,

It's done. The janitor found the body just as we anticipated, and he's already under suspicion. We need to stick to our story and stay calm. If anyone asks, we had no idea what Daniel was working on.

Remember, we're just as shocked as everyone else. We need to keep our heads down until this blows over.
